PUBLIC QUESTIONS AND COMMENTS

Mayor Barnett explained that there was an incident last week that involved the targets used for training by the Police Department. After concerns were brought to the city’s attention, the targets have since been removed pending a legal review of the department along with other department trainings and how these targets are used to ensure the city is following procedures.

The following persons spoke during public questions and comments regarding the use of the targets at the Police Department and images taken and posted to social media:

Jamie Neufeld, Glenwild, spoke in support of the Police Department.

Cameron Blunt, Pontiac, MI representing Oakland Forward, inquired about city plans to address the issue.

Mayor Barnett reiterated the city's plans to hold a legal review and noted that the images have since been removed pending that review.

Sheila Hughes, Winterset Circle, expressed concern with images of black men being used as targets and suggested the use of silhouettes.

Michael Sweeney, Mulberry Drive, spoke in favor of the Police Department and their professionalism.

Dr. Webster-Jackson suggested that if images are used, that images of all races are utilized for training as she understands the need for this type of training but to avoid targeting one group of people.

Danielle Ohm, Foxgrove Ct., spoke of the history of institutional racism and feels not all are respected equally as proven by the use of the targets in question. She expressed concern with the use of life-like targets and requested that the legal review is an independent review and shared with the public by Council in its entirety.

Kermit Williams, Founder of Oakland Forward, thanked the city for removing the targets and acknowledged other members of Oakland Forward in the audience. He suggested additional diversity training and offered assistance from Oakland Forward. He expressed the need to create a feeling of safety for all and asked the Council to help change systematic racism and create policies and procedures that are reviewed periodically.

James McQueen, Pontiac, MI and member of Oakland Forward, expressed concern with the use of these types of targets that he at no time used even during his training for Desert Storm.

Kevin Clark, Farmington Hills Police Officer, stated that he is proud of the department and training he has received in Farmington Hills and he has never been trained to shoot at any particular race, age or gender and the reason various targets are used is to work through any explicit bias towards any particular demographic. He expressed concern with the divisiveness this has caused as the officers have worked hard to be equitable in dealing with all people.

Mayor Barnett expressed concern that nobody called a City Council member, staff or the Police Chief regarding these concerns before a press conference was held with the media.

Councilmember Bridges stated that he would like to see data that shows these targets are widely used. He asked Officer Clark about the use of targets and bias against a certain demographic and if he ever trained shooting at a black target.

Officer Clark explained the targets used and stated that if any officer has a bias, they have to work through this and the targets and training are used for this purpose. He answered that he had not trained shooting at a black target but has used the Milo training which depicts various actors of all demographics and situations.

Councilmember Bruce inquired if the targets teach restraint as some targets are holding a cell phone and not a gun. Officer Clark agreed they teach restraint and reiterated that the targets help officers work through explicit bias and to deal with the issue and not the color, gender, etc. of the individual.

Councilmember Massey stated that he researched the images used and of the 2,300 images, 185 have an image of a black person so the photos taken and posted he believes were selective. All of the images varied in holding a weapon versus a cell phone or other item for training purposes. He stated that the numbers do not reflect certain individuals are being targeted.

Latricia Hemphill, resident, stated that the images she saw in the news posted by a parent were of black men in hoodies holding guns and she asked that the City be honest and transparent and if this is true to own it so the community can trust the city and move forward.

Joseph Williams, Winterset, spoke of importance of social imaging and messaging and in today's culture the need for people to be more conscious of their actions and words.

Tula Kabone, Real Talk Radio, stated that the black community respects the police. He spoke of the racism he has seen first-hand living in the south and commented that explicit bias exists in all people and it is not black against white but right against wrong. He thanked the Mayor for this opportunity to speak but to not forget the children that saw those images.

Mark Fancher, Staff Attorney for the Racial Justice Project for ACLU of MI, suggested ending the use of targets with any racial characteristics. He spoke of social conditioning and stated that racial violence still exists. He feels the targets promote black men as criminal and dangerous. He strongly urged the following:

- An investigation into whether such targets were used as reported
- Identify the individuals responsible and let the public know
- Commit to using only bullseye or silhouette targets going forward
- Arrange for appropriately credentialed professionals to conduct interviews with officers on the force about racial attitude and why there were no objections to use of the targets in the department at any level
- Require officers receive training to understand why there is concern about this matter and any Officers that demonstrate they "don't get it" re removed from the police force.

Dr. Patricia Coleman-Burns, resident, thanked the community for coming out this evening and stated there should be listening and not speaking by those being challenged. She agreed a diversity officer is needed in the city and commented on systemic racism that must change and need to change the standards by which we operate. The people speaking feel something real and it should not be wiped away by common standards.

Milton Moore, Nottingwood, stated that he was a victim of racial profiling growing up in Detroit and to all of the people who were not of color to picture their family members on those targets as that is how black people feel. To say it is a practice throughout the nation is not the point. Whoever is responsible should be held accountable.

Steven Kennedy, former Farmington Hills resident and current Pontiac resident, stated that this issue is bigger than Farmington Hills and one good he feels will come of this is that other communities will now review their targets and practices. He expressed concern with the Council challenging comments made by the public and feels they should just listen and hear the pain from the community with no rebuttal. He commended Council for this forum and the police for their service.

Angie Smith, Farmington School Board Vice President, thanked the Mayor and Council for their service and for dealing with the difficult issues. She commented on the open door policy of Council and stated that the situation is hurtful and was never brought to anyone's attention in the city. She thanked Officer Clark for his service and the Police Departments' service to the schools. She acknowledged the Police Academy for civilians initiated by Chief King and stated that both City Councils and the School Board is working hard to help the community.

Mayor Barnett acknowledged that the comments and feelings of all that spoke are real and Council has heard them and are addressing the situation.

City Manager Gary Mekjian introduced himself and his background and spoke of the programs and efforts of the city for diversity, equity and inclusion but acknowledged there is more work to be done.

Police Chief Jeff King apologized to the community, Council, Police Department and staff but feels that the city will come out better for having these conversations. He stated that the city values the citizens that came out tonight to speak and ask questions about procedures and he encourages residents to bring concerns forward in the future but asks simply that they do so by bringing concerns to the city directly so staff can gather information and address the concern in a comprehensive and transparent fashion and provide context and critical information about the procedures and process, which he plans to do this evening. Chief King explained the use of targets by the Department and procedures used for training. He noted the steps immediately taken once the Department was made aware of the concern and steps that will be taken going forward to investigate the incident that will be shared.

Councilmember Bridges thanked Chief King for acknowledging the sensitivity of this matter and stated that the city has a great Police Department and that this is not meant to indict the entire Department. He does not believe it was the right decision to display those targets as there are other options and would like to see them permanently removed. He added that he has expressed concern over the racial disparity with regard to citations issued according to the city's dashboard statistics and asked for an explanation several weeks ago and still has not received any update. He wants to see a more diverse work force and for all to be aware of the fact we are a racially diverse community.

Councilmember Bruce agreed that there is systemic racism and racial profiling today, but he has always been about fairness and for all to be treated equally. As a clinical, neuropsychologist, he considers himself an expert in human performance and that includes explicit bias. The goal of the Police Department training is to train the explicit bias out of officers by using targets of different races. He explained that you change behavioral expectation through these trainings that include use of targets of all races, not by using silhouettes. He is concerned that if the targets are removed permanently, those explicit biases will remain making the city less safe. He asked the Police Chief if he believes the targets used keep people from being shot.

Police Chief King responded that he does believe the training provided keeps people from being shot and mentioned that the Farmington Hills training is known as the gold standard in Oakland County.

Councilmember Bruce agreed all of the people should be heard but that cannot happen if they do not come to the city and he is upset that this issue was brought to the press for people to make assumptions and that the city was not provided that opportunity to be heard. He feels this type of training is important and that it works.

Mable Fox, resident, thanked Councilmember Bridges for information he brought forth regarding the dashboard statistics and spoke about tolerance and the fact that she wants to feel like she belongs and not just tolerated.

Mayor Barnett commented that more information is needed on the statistics from the dashboard to provide context around those statistics and staff is working on that as well.

Councilmember Knol stated that she wants to be part of a community that respects everyone and has the best trained police department in the United States as she does not want an accidental shooting of anyone of any color. She asked Chief King to explain how the photos of people in the targets are used versus using silhouettes and how that best trains the officers.

In response to Council, Police Chief King discussed how the use of targets with photos or video training versus just using silhouette targets better equip officers to react. He stated that regardless of the event, officers are trained to react to behavior through use of the targets and not an individual.

Councilmember Boleware spoke of the different experiences of black people versus white and the fact that there may be certain triggers that would not necessarily affect white people. Council suggested a Diversity, Equity and Inclusion (DEI) Officer and as a result of those conversations hired a consultant. She stated the time for consulting should be done and that hiring of a DEI Officer on staff is critical and that person could continue to work with the consultant to get practices in place.

Darlene King, DEI Consultant, spoke of the work and progress the city has made in its DEI efforts and the journey staff has taken to date and work they have yet to accomplish. She suggested that best practice is to hire this person from within as that person would already have a greater understanding of the culture.

Mayor Barnett suggested that Ms. King attend a future study session to discuss the progress made to date.

Mayor Pro-Tem Newlin stated that she was upset by some of the comments on social media suggesting that she did not care because she had not replied to the comments. She stated that while she may not have replied on social media, she listens and cares and has empathy as she has had exposure to these racial concerns expressed in her own family.

Councilmember Massey stated there were selective images that were taken and posted to social media but he recognized that the topic was an emotional one that has brought a lot of people out to speak, which is a good thing because racism is wrong. The city is working towards further diversity and has made progress and embraces diversity. He commented that the images are part of an educational process to make officers better and the officers go through fair and impartial training to explain how racial bias can impact decision making. Dr. Massey stated that the dashboard shows statistics of arrests but not where they were arrested or if the person was a resident so staff is working on that information. He added that the Farmington Hills Police Department is one of the best policing agencies in the State and he hopes this issue will be resolved.

Darlene King, DEI Consultant, added that the city has a DEI Advisory Board comprised of department leaders and an Advisory Council comprised of individuals working for the city including two Police Sergeants and one Detective.

There were no further public comments. City Council took a short break at this time.

CONSIDERATION OF ADOPTION OF A RESOLUTION ESTABLISHING WATER RATES FOR FISCAL YEAR 2022/2023. CMR 6-22-57

Tammy Gushard, Deputy Director for Department of Public Works, explained that the Great Lakes Water Authority (GLWA) voted to remove the bad debt of Highland Park so the rates are slightly lower than those previously presented at the City Council study session. She reviewed the proposed water rates and noted that the water tower has represented an overall savings of $20 million for the city.

Council commented that this still does not reflect what High Park owes for past years and that discussions should continue on how the city could recoup that money.
